SYNOPSIS

We begin in a castle outside the wonderful town of Chicago, where Prince Eggbert mourns the death of his wicked father, Tommy. Heading into the woods, Eggbert wonders – will life ever be next to normal again? Or is everything in his miserable life cracked once and for all? On the verge of throwing himself into a big river, Eggbert recalls a piece of advice his father sang to him as a nine-year-old boy (from Syracuse): “When life gives you eggs, make an OMELETTE!” Eggbert sizzles with inspiration and contacts a chorus line of guys and dolls, all led by his pal Joey, to help him follow his father’s advice. They urge Eggbert to rent a skillet, let down his hair, and fry the biggest, most beautiful omelette north of Oklahoma. Before Eggbert has time to wonder if the plan is to be or not to be, the grease is in the pan. Delighting everyone with this delicious new dish, Eggbert and company head out on the town to celebrate, making him the most happy fella in all the land!
